The Lenkin Company and The Tower Companies call it the most sophisticated building they've ever designed.

From the outside, the soaring angles of the rising roof line make the building appear taller than its neighbors. The glass façade and outdoor landscaping blur the line from exterior to interior.

On the inside, natural elements of air, water, earth and light combine to create an entirely liveable indoor environment. Registered LEED™ Gold, the building features the latest techniques in green design. Works of art displayed throughout the building reflect a merging of architecture and nature. On the top floor, the penthouse gallery leads to the rooftop bamboo garden with breathtaking views of the Washington skyline.

One look is all you need to discover why 1050 K Street will be the capital's next great business destination.
